The bottom line is most app's I've installed won't show up here on the market. I'm guessing Samsung isn't directly representing what's shown on the market, which is confusing considering I can find 7 applications in the market that I can't find on Samsung's own market page. What am I missing here? A: You need to enable developer mode by going into Settings -> About device and tapping "Build number" 7 times. Go back to Settings, tap Build number again and you should see an App flair you can add to the home screen of your device. Note that this is only available in a limited number of countries and may not be available in your location. If you are already in developer mode, navigate to the Android SDK Manager and refresh the packages list. This will update the list of installed apps on your device. In addition, it will include a Developer mode application in the list that will allow you to install apps and run them. Finally, you need to tell Samsung about your app (for which you will need an Enterprise Developer account). For this, you need to create a new device on the developer portal and use your details there (which should make it easy to link your app with the page you need). Samsung's market has a lot of apps but only few are listed here. It's not clear what's the difference between an App found on the market and listed on the developer portal (as far as I understand the latter only involves installing/debugging). This goes the same for Samsung's own app store, which has a lot of apps but of them only a few are listed here. A: The best app to do this is "Combateur". You can find it at play store. It does all of this in few clicks. I have used this before arOnTop and arOnTop is very useful, but this one is better. Q: File Upload code not saving in MVC 5 I created a basic MVC 5 project. I am trying to upload a CSV file to a FileContent() property of a Model Class. The View is currently returning a View() useful, though I'm not sure I understand why. I used this quite extensively last year. You just click on the tray icon and a compact toolbar appears - just clicking the tool buttons will open the task manager and kill the pdf reader. Click the button 'Close my Adobe Reader windows' to have your previously open pdfs return to the desktop as regular windows. (And similarly, click the button 'Restore my Adobe Reader windows' to have your previously open pdfs return to the desktop as tabs.) A: The solution for me was the same as for @Elliott, but removing the PDFs from the desktop. For each pdf, I do this command in Terminal. for file in $(ls ~/Desktop/myfiles.pdf) do # kill the pdf reader nohup xpdf "$file" & done
