in a dizzying variety of stories. It's a difficult market to break into; you may have heard. But a couple of creative writers have answered the call. This episode is sponsored by the online games Where the Wild Things Are, which let you discover the world and its many oddities, and Pixel Patrol, a free game from Simon and Schuster that takes your step-by-step instruction of how to read. Comments (4) Hi Jessica. Your podcast was very helpful to me, especially in finding the writer's names for the stories you mentioned. I'm very glad I found your podcast, and I will listen to each of these again. I didn't know who Justin Roiland was until now! I love the idea of anime influence in the stories, but I do have one criticism: the "gimp" was pretty stereotypical. If you want to make a joke about anime, a "gimp" would never be appropriate. A "gorilla" or a "komodo dragon" is more likely to appeal to an adult audience. A monkey would be more appropriate for children's entertainment. I also think "gimp" is a not-very-inspiring name. (It's not even spelled right.) I wouldn't say your jokes are bad, and I do enjoy them, but I think you're missing out on opportunities for better humor if you don't use different types of humor. Thanks for the feedback, Jessica. I appreciate your comments. I just wanted to show that I really like a lot of these stories and they are really different. I am learning a lot about humor and voice acting. I think that the differences in humor, voice acting, etc. make the stories really interesting. This is why I am learning about it. a1d647c40b religious denomination, the Southern Baptist Convention, is under fire after he said in a statement on Sunday that "Jesus is the only way to heaven." Russell Moore, a Southern Baptist priest and president of the SBC's Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission, wrote that his denomination has "not come to terms with homosexuality" and said its "biblically orthodox voice has been drowned out by the denomination's more culturally evangelical tendencies." "… you cannot be in Christ and not believe in the gospel of the kingdom, and you cannot receive the free gift of the Holy Spirit without being baptized and receiving the Lord Jesus Christ as your Savior and Lord," Moore said. "The gospel is the announcement that he is the Savior of all who repent." His comments came in a statement in response to legislation that effectively nullifies a local ordinance in Houston that would have allowed transgender people to use the restrooms and other facilities that correspond with their gender identity. The ordinance failed after it was challenged by conservative religious groups, including the Texas Eagle Forum and Liberty Institute. Moore's statement, from the Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission, is the first public statement of his denomination on the Houston ordinance since its defeat. In his statement, Moore said he is "overjoyed" that the council did not follow through with the ordinance, which was "a major threat to religious liberty in the city." "We are grateful that the brave members of our city council chose to vote to uphold religious liberty in our city.
