EventCow Description: This application is a simplified version of the main EventCow website. It is designed to allow you to create and manage races, participants and results. This application requires JavaScript to be enabled. We use Event Cow to handle results for an event that is sanctioned by the Colorado State Cycling Association (CSCC) and is called the Hella'Ride. This race is a 40K cross country mountain bike race from my home in Boulder, CO to the top of Pikes Peak. It will be my 5th consecutive year running it and the data is uploaded to their site to allow other racers to see their results. There are two scenarios: 1. When a rider finishes the race (must be within the 7 hour time limit) they are able to log in to our Event Cow database. If they have a valid CSCC wristband they can download an Excel spreadsheet of their results. If they do not have a valid wristband they receive a notification. In this scenario Event Cow will serve as a relay system that connects us to the CSCC site and will pull the results from their database. 2. We also have a manual process to upload the results to the Event Cow database. This is the standard process and is what most racers do. I have tried both methods of uploading the results to the CSCC site and like the Event Cow system better. It is very quick and easy to add a new rider's results. SMS does not exactly replace the regular microphone, but acts as a replacement for your assistant. The program will automatically detect the microphone when there is none or the assistant cannot hear the signal. This allows you to use the microphone in an easy way during your live presentations. Description: EventCow is a handy application designed to manage the results for the races organized on the EventCow.org website. It allows you to organize races and store the results on a local database without connecting it to the Internet. The program allows you to manage the participants registrations, shirts and results with minimum effort. The results can be exported to a CSV file or posted online when you can connect to your online account. Note: In order to post results or import the race details you need to create an account on this page. 3.03.2015 10:42:30 PM n EventCow Description: SMS does not exactly replace the regular microphone, but acts as a replacement for your assistant.
