Also, have a look at this tool: (free registration required) A: I recommend not downloading that file and especially not using it. You can try and run the executable in safe mode. Q: How to use variable's environment path in python I know that you can use os.getcwd() to get the current working directory. But I need to use the path.replace function. In my program, I need to use the path like the example below. The method get_book_path() returns the path like this: "c:\program files\my books" So I'm trying to replace the name of the file to "Theory" like this: def get_book_path(): path = os.path.join(os.getcwd(), "book", "Theory") path = path.replace("book", "Theory") print(path) return path But I get this error: NameError: name 'path' is not defined A: Use os.path.join: def get_book_path(): path = os.path.join(os.getcwd(), "book", "Theory") path = path.replace("book", "Theory") print(path) return path Why is Justice allowing CCTV footage of the hostage taker to be published? Why is Justice allowing CCTV footage of the hostage taker to be published? A high court judge has issued the first British ruling that the need to publish security camera footage in order to maintain public confidence is outweighed by the right to privacy. The footage shot during a robbery in which one of the participants was killed and a police officer injured was ordered to be made public by the Court of Appeal. The court – the most important of which is the Supreme Court – ruled that the human right to privacy allowed
