9 October 2013 - I recently completed offensive security penetration testing with Backtrack, as well as course materials (course manual in pdf format and video). I use it to help me evaluate security in my company and understand where I can make improvements. I found that while I wasn't able to access most of the sites in my test set, I was still able to do some good things to improve security and make my website more reliable. I have some notes about it. My first blog post After I finished offensive testing, I had a blog (as well as a website).
