A: There's no language semantics that mandate static final variables to be initialized upon first usage, so in your example, the answer is undefined. In fact, the Scala compiler compiles with the inline flag enabled, which means that the compiler is free to treat the variable as initializing to 0, 1, or any arbitrary value. I think it's safe to say that if the JVM implementation in question did initialize the variable, it would also initialize it with some value that makes sense for the run-time semantics of the system. For example, Java's inner classes used to have a very different runtime behavior than it does currently, with every call to a static method wrapping the previous call to the static method in a new thread, but if any implementation decided to initialize the variable to, say, the current timestamp when the inner class was declared, that would break the invariants of the program, and other inner classes would also break if there was no guarantee that they would always be initialized to a constant value. Regardless, even though the variable isn't "necessarily initialized", it's value may be "necessarily final". That is to say that the compiler may not be able to assign a new value to the variable at any given moment if its value is final. A: Yes, they will. As other people have pointed out, the JVM will perform static initialization as needed, and it is a good practice to explicitly include it. For example, if you use static initializers, the pattern for static initializers is the following: // constructor public class Outer { public class Inner{ // @

S. 79, 99 S.Ct. 430, 58 L.Ed.2d 387 (1978), the court will assume that the adjudicatory system is acting in good faith, and will measure the degree of that assumption by the scrutiny which it applies to an administrative system of hearings. While this court, in deciding this threshold question, will assume that the government acted reasonably in issuing an HEW directive in the first place, it will not assume that the government acted reasonably in issuing a revised directive to the SUSY program. On the contrary, it will assume that the government has acted in a manner worthy of condemnation. This assumption will lead to the conclusion that there is a violation of the applicants' fifth amendment rights. In deciding that the agency acted unreasonably in issuing the new directive, this court is well aware that it is not the province of the court to direct the manner in which the Department of Health and Human Services should disburse its funds. However, the court should note that at least one federal district court has held that even though the government has discretion in the ultimate use of its funds, it has no discretion to fail to act as it believes it should act, if, as a result, the funds are irretrievably lost. See Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. 618, 656, 89 S.Ct. 1322, 22 L.Ed.2d 600 (1969) (Harlan, J., dissenting). In Shapiro the majority of the Court held that the state law limiting welfare benefits to the unemployed for a fixed period was constitutional because of a voluntary waiver provision by the applicant. The Court held, however, that because the state had refused to accept welfare applications from new applicants for at least the period of time fixed by the state law, welfare had been denied to an identifiable class. Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. at 627, 89 S.Ct. 1322. Justice Harlan, in his dissent, stated that because the state was found to have created an irrebuttable presumption of non-entitlement to welfare which could not be overcome by a showing of need, the state had acted unlawfully. Id. at 656, 89 S.

Frimley Frimley is a settlement within the London Borough of Hillingdon, in the Hayes area of Greater London, England. Frimley Green is located on the A4 London Orbital at the junction of the A4037 road and A4114 road. History The estate of Frimley is recorded in the Domesday Book as Frimilie. The name is a contraction of free man or free woman, the latter being the feminine of freeman. The population of the parish by 1086 was 162. In 1086, Frimley had one church (St Mary's), "very ancient and held from the bishop by a cleric", four smallholders and two slaves. The church had one priest, one reeve, two bordars, two carucates of land, and a churchyard. Frimley Green Frimley Green, or Frimley Green, is the main part of
