Scanning PDF files is an important task. In many cases, users prefer to search for specific information in a particular document instead of looking for the document itself. Searching for specific text and saving the results in a separate file is a very useful solution, because users don't have to spend time locating the document. The application called PDF Text Extractor helps you find text inside PDF documents and save it in separate files. Besides, it allows you to filter the search results by various options, such as file type, page number, font, font color, font size, and so on. After a PDF document has been analyzed, users can choose the number of the extracted texts they want to save in a separate file. The application is able to extract text from any document, regardless of its origin, such as a Microsoft Word file, E-mail, an image, a page from a Web browser, or a scanned document. PDF Text Extractor can work with scanned documents as well, as it is able to locate text in any PDF file and save the results in a file. PDF Text Extractor is a small but efficient application that offers users the ability to browse for documents, save the results, and filter the found texts by the specified criteria.
