Idle CPU Automatic Shutdown review: The application provides the most basic functionality to allow you to control the CPU usage activity and hence, the idle counter. However, the application does not allow you to change or set CPU usage limit. It is restricted to the 10% idle, 10 seconds criteria. This could be a problem for power users and power users who demand less idle periods. In addition, you can not change the behavior of the application with respect to the UI, i.e. the appearance, and hence, user experience. It is a barebones application and does not allow you to customize or control the behavior. 2. Free Backup PC Scheduler Free Backup PC Scheduler is an application and a task that allows you to automate the backup process for your computer. It is a standalone application that is not merely connected to your backup drive. It allows you to save the files to it from various sources, such as a flash drive or memory card, for example. Note that you can not control the backup procedure from your computer; hence, the program is simply an application to let you create an automatic backup system for your computer. The developers have designed the app to automatically scan the system once in a while and save all the files to the designated backup drive. See Full Description for Free Backup PC Scheduler. Free Backup PC Scheduler Review: This is an all in one program that is available for free. However, this does not mean that it would be simple for you to work with. The program displays a very basic and simplistic interface that is not easy to understand and is not user-friendly. 3. Couch Potato Couch Potato is a program that can create a computer alarm. What's New In Idle CPU Automatic Shutdown?

The application provides a tool for automatically turning off the computer when the CPU usage of the central processor is under a predetermined level for more than a predefined interval. First of all, it checks whether the CPU activity is high or low for the predefined interval, if it's low then it alerts you to shut the computer down. On the other hand, if the CPU activity is high, then it creates an alert to shut down the PC. However, the application will only monitor your desktop sessions and will not monitor the programs and whether they are running or not, so it is best for people using multiple monitors. The app is known as an idle maintenance checker app that helps you keep your PC in a constant standby mode. It provides you with a barebones and little GUI that monitors the CPU activity and when you push a button that will allow you to shut down your PC. It should be noted that this tool is good for home users, but cannot be used by business personnel to ensure that the PC has not been used since when the app started. It can be used as a pre-emptive shut down application. Idle CPU Automatic Shutdown is a very small application.
