Ending products that denote awards are typically accompanied with a label bearing the words "Best Award" or "Best" "Highest Merit". forged items with certificates of authenticity usually bear the name of the certificate as shown on the bottom of the item page. The standard version may be processed according to the purchase order or voucher. For the contractual version, the purchase order or voucher is part of the legal contract. Falsified items Falsified items are counterfeit products that may be intentionally sold or used to deceive consumers. A counterfeiter is a person engaged in producing and selling counterfeit items. Counterfeit items do not bear the same security protections or certifications as authentic products. Counterfeiters may print fake codes, labels, holograms or brand names and steal the actual designs and artwork. Once counterfeit items have been produced and sold in large quantities and gained popularity, it is difficult for manufacturers, producers or retailers to recall the goods or stop their production, as the counterfeit items are already in the hands of consumers. A common example is the sale of counterfeit vitamins and pharmaceutical products. This type of forgery is illegal in most countries, as well as being a breach of the intellectual property rights of the original manufacturer.
