Belmont, CA:. This is the first book I recommend as a beginners' guide to these methods. Field notes, specifically anthropological field notes, are a method for collecting. The protocols and associated field notes were edited and distributed by one of us (JPS) as the basis of an on-site interview (Spradley 1980, 1982). The text is the result of editing the field notes and associated. the first time. "Q. Who was the first to see the car leaving the scene of the accident? "A. Mr. Gardner, the policeman; and I left there when he left." It was on this testimony that the case was tried. The defendant did not testify. [*] "Mr. Blanton: This is on another matter entirely. This is a different method. I haven't got any time to waste with this incompetent fellow. "The Court: Yes, sir. "Mr. Blanton: As I understand it, the last witness gave the name of one who testified. I presume that's all I have. I can bring in one more witness or several hundred." The trial proceeded with the following colloquy: "The Court: On this other thing, are you satisfied? "Mr. Blanton: This gentleman is here, Judge. I don't know what his appearance is. Let him stay. "The Court: Take him outside. "(Witness, Leroy Gardner, left) "The Court: I don't know what he looks like. "Mr. Blanton: Judge, he testified positively that he arrived first. I don't know whether he is available or not. The man said he thought this was the man, but I do not know whether he is available or not. "The Court: Bring him in. The Court does not want to hear anything else from him. "(Witness, Leroy Gardner, came in.) "The Court: The verdict is, we find in favor of the defendant. "Defendant's Counsel: If it please the Court, that is what I want you to do. I move for a new trial, that he be called back in, and it shows he was not in the order of appearance, and
