All image files saved in Photoshop use the .psd file extension. Learning Photoshop Photoshop is definitely not the easiest application to learn. It has many features and options that are very easy to create an error with — the number of control combinations can be confusing. Even with the help of tutorials, it can be hard to remember how everything works. But it's also fun, and can bring new possibilities to any photo editing work. In the following sections, I describe the areas of Photoshop that you can spend time to master, and the programs that will help you along the way. Using and customizing the workspace The workspace provides a small set of tools and toolsets that are the same for every image, regardless of the edit. These tools are the same in every image, and you can make their work area the same — and this is what you do in the workspace. If you want to apply a filter or an adjustment to all images in your folder, you have to open the workspace for all images. If you want a special effects look for only one or a few photos, then you must work in the workspace. The workspace tools (filters, styles, layers, adjustment layers, and so on) are always available, but the panel that holds them can be hidden or shown at the bottom of the workspace. Figure 4-1 shows the workspace tools added on top of a photo. You can see the workspace panel, which displays these tools, at the bottom. Figure 4-1: The tools in the Photoshop workspace are the same for every image. If you want to see the workspace tools and the panel, you can either press D on the keyboard, choose Window⇒Workspace, or choose Window⇒Workspace or press the Workspace button (the square with the plus sign in the lower-left corner of the workspace) on the workspace panel.

You can also click the down arrow to reveal the workspace tools at the bottom of the Photoshop window. We rarely work without the workspace, but you can turn it off if you don't like it. To toggle it on and off, click the down arrow in the lower-left corner of the workspace panel and choose Show/Hide the Workspace. Creating new files The most commonly used image editing programs (such as Adobe Lightroom and Photoshop) allow you to create images from scratch within the program. In these programs, files

In linear algebra, a linear operator  $T : V \rightarrow V$  is said to be continuous if:  $\exists \gamma_i \in \mathbb{C} \text{ s.t. } \|T(x)\| = \max_{\|v\|=1} \|\langle T(x), v \rangle\| = \|T\| = \max_{\|v\|=1} \|\langle x, v \rangle\|$

Show that  $f(x) =$

$\log(1+x^2) - \log(1+x)$  is a concave

$f(x)$  is a concave function on  $[a, b]$

News came down Tuesday afternoon that Chicago Bears linebacker Leonard Floyd has been suspended for the first four games of the 2018 NFL season for violating the league's performance-enhancing drug (PED) policy. The suspension is effective immediately and runs for games 1-4 of the season. Per his PED policy suspension, Floyd will be permitted to return to practice during the suspension. The suspension comes in addition to the one he already served for a violation of the league's substance-abuse policy, in relation to a November 2016 drug test. That suspension also was for four games. The league released a statement: "In November, Leonard Floyd was suspended by the NFL and will serve a four-game suspension, including the first four games of this season, for violations of the NFL's Policy on Substances of Abuse. The suspension will become effective immediately. Floyd will be permitted to return to practice during the suspension. The discipline is consistent with the appropriate discipline in previous cases of this nature.” While the suspension is coming in connection to a policy that applies to players at all positions, in other NFL cases (per Pro Football Reference) Floyd has only missed games while serving suspensions. The first came in 2017, for a violation of the policy. He had a second suspension in 2018, which he served during the

I have created a custom Pages called "Bookings" (which is displayed on my site) which has data about a job/business booking, but I need to link that to a custom field in the Custom CMS so that I can display some custom data in the booking's status and details pages - without duplicating that data on my business's normal Pages. The field is "job_type" which is a dropdown menu, but when I try and link the field to the booking's page, it seems to replace the entire page with the single data value when the field is edited. How can I link the custom field to the custom Pages?

Custom pages are created using the Custom CMS and when creating a page I add the custom field at the top with the Menu/Link settings (see image below). A: If you're using the WordPress REST API, the following hooks provide an interface to request and edit the pages
