You can paint with brush, spray can, or pencil on paper, canvas, or plastic. You can lay things out in different layers and arrange them. You can align them to a grid and resize them as well. You can draw on the canvas, make selections, and add frames and text. You can paint by using shapes or just by painting on an area of the canvas. And you can draw images from the digital photos you import from your camera or scanner. But don't take it for granted that what you paint on a canvas is what you end up with. As with the real thing, a digital canvas or painted image is just a sketch, a quick picture, and a rough outline. Keep in mind that Digital Mosaic Pro (discussed later in this chapter) is a lot like Paint Shop Pro. And you can use it to create and arrange digital images on a canvas, to create complex customized layouts, to import images from your digital camera or scanner, and to draw images by hand. You can even paint on a grid or guide shapes, as if you were on a canvas. You can add frames, text, and other elements to your canvases as well. You can add accents to the edges of frames, such as crosshatching, stippling, and spattering. You can add backgrounds as well as intricate text. In addition, you can draw images by hand, add special effects, and perform many other digital editing tasks. ## Using the Drawing Tool Paint Shop Pro gives you several different drawing tools. It has the basic line tool, which enables you to draw thin lines and curves and can be used either in dashing or raster mode. You can also use a dotted line tool that works in either raster or dashing mode. In addition, you have a swatch tool that enables you to color a section of the canvas and then import a swatch color from the palettes

Relation of serum gastrin concentration to recurrent ulceration and GI blood flow. The serum gastrin concentration was found to be related to the severity of recurrent ulcer in 50 male patients. A significant positive correlation was found between the serum gastrin concentration and the gastric acid output. Also a significant positive correlation was found between the gastrin concentration and the ulcer index. Indices of gastric blood flow were, however, unrelated to the gastrin concentration. It is suggested that the serum gastrin concentration is a reflection of the acid output of the corpus. Indices of gastric blood flow seem not to be useful in the prediction of recurrent ulcer.
