You can also use the GIMP in Chapter 16 to manipulate raster images. Tracing images, graphics, and photographs Some of the most artistic or evocative photographs, graphic designs, and other artwork are traced. A tracing is a graphic outline of something in a digital format. Photoshop makes it quick and easy for you to trace something. Tracing a photograph, a graphic design, or a drawing is quick and easy. You don't even need to trace or trace! You can just paint (or use brushes if you have them). Tracing a photograph Photoshop offers three methods of tracing a photograph: the standard "Hand Tool," the direct selection method, and the Brush tool. After you create a drawing layer, you can trace a photograph in the following ways: Hand Tool: First create a layer, as described in the earlier sections. Then hold down the spacebar and drag a rectangle on the canvas to enclose the area you want to trace. When you move your cursor over the photograph, the Hand Tool should appear. Figure 17-2 shows the Hand Tool used to trace a photograph. Drag across the picture and you'll find that the image is outlined. The area you drag over selects the area that you want to keep in your new drawing. Direct Selection: With the Direct Selection tool (which you can enable by opening the Tools panel and scrolling to the right and selecting the tool), click where you want to draw over the photo, as shown in Figure 17-3. You can then move your cursor to move to a different point. When you're satisfied with the new path, press Enter (Return on the Mac). Brush: With the Brushes dialog box (by default, click the image or select the Brush tool), enable the Brush tool. You now have a choice of the built-in brush or any of Photoshop's many sample brushes, as shown in Figure 17-4. Select an area that you want to keep. Press the left bracket key to bring up the Brush settings. Click the color box and select the color of your photograph. Click and drag the bottom of the Brush box, and you'll see the sample brush. Click and drag down, and you can change the settings to alter the brush. Take a look at the Brush Settings dialog box if you want to get comfortable with using brushes in Photoshop. Brasília A FAV Brasil investiu ainda em fevereiro para 2017 R$ 5,3 milhões em patrimônio líquido (sem garantias), segundo dados do portal do Monitor do Mercado Financeiro (MMF). A última variação mais expressiva, em abril, foi de quase R$ 22 milhões. Essas são as décimas maiores em quatro meses, das datas de janeiro de 2016 até abril deste ano. Apenas no mês passado, o capital próprio da estatal completou quase R$ 6 milhões, apenas para estacionar na classificação. Na sexta-feira, a Agência Nacional de Petróleo (ANP) determinou que a Petrobras continuasse com seus investimentos de capital na forma de ativos, para evitar que ocorresse uma perda significativa, além de reduzir a vulnerabilidade do óleo do pré-sal que está sendo exportado para os países do Oriente Médio. A congelamento foi uma reação dos investidores para que a empresa investisse, mas os valores já não são novos. O montante atualizado para 2017 segue-se a um recuo de mais de 20% do patrimônio de risco no ano passado. Com um saldo negativo de R$ 49,6 bilhões em 2016 e um daqui para frente, a empresa segue na expressão "motro" no mercado. A privacy watchdog group is calling on lawyers to stop profiting off the public's secrets. The group wants the top legal firms to be barred from collecting fees from specific cases. Susan Landau is a lawyer for a Chicago law firm and serves as privacy counsel for several large law firms. She spoke at an American Bar Association conference recently, during a panel on ethical, legal and policy issues. "We would love to be the partner in a law firm that is an ethical, privacy-centered firm," Landau said. "But because we are not managing it, we are not doing that. It's impossible. We don't have the time. We don't have the resources." Landau said that even privacy lawyers are only taught to look at laws, not ethics, when it comes to privacy practices. She and other lawyers on the panel said they're trying to work within the current ethical framework to make privacy matters better. "Like all things, we sometimes do things that we should not do, and we have to contend with that," said Greg Burke, an associate at Foley & Lardner LLP. Landau said you can't "make a habit" of looking at ethics, and you shouldn't expect firms to act ethically all the time. Mark Robson, a senior partner at McGuire Woods, said that changing the law is important, but people don't always follow it. "It's not always easy, although you do your best," Robson said. "If you change the law, it's not necessarily going to change the reality that people want to do the right thing." Aaron Mackey, a lawyer at Mankin Brown, said it's not easy to protect your client's privacy while still trying to win the case. "I do think that it's a challenge for lawyers," Mackey said. Landau said a lot of clients hire firms because they want to make an impact in their communities. She said when it comes to protecting privacy, that's a positive thing. "If you can influence the policy of a firm and work with them to come up with a solution that does more good than harm, then I think that's something that's really, really important," Landau said.Physical training and performance outcome in athletes who underwent recombinant human bone morphogenetic protein-2 (rhBMP-2) injections [Sc
