Customizations In addition to what is available through the Graphical User Interface (GUI), some extensions may be implemented by Visual LISP scripts or VBA code. Autodesk extended the AutoCAD Cracked Version and AutoCAD LT features with many add-on applications that are available as AutoCAD plugins. These plugins were written to expand the AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT functionality by providing new commands and menus, new features, editing, or new project types. These are available as software or as plug-ins for AutoCAD, AutoCAD LT and Autodesk's DWG, and PDF file formats. Pricing AutoCAD is offered for free to Autodesk customers and third party developers who purchase a license. Professional users of AutoCAD may purchase a subscription, which allows on-going use of the software on a per-seat, per-network, or per-year basis. Third-party support and customization Unlike other CAD programs, such as those from MicroStation and AutoCAD LT, AutoCAD does not have native support for web applications, or for programming in Microsoft languages such as Visual Basic. Autodesk offers a variety of applications for additional functionality, many of which are based on ObjectARX or VBA, such as: Autodesk Exchange Apps: an application store where one can find a variety of plug-ins, including many sample Visual LISP, Visual Basic and C++ plug-ins, that extend AutoCAD functionality. Autodesk Vault: a cloud-based solution that allows uploading and viewing of a user's drawings, storing them as CAD standards or file formats, and working with them in the cloud. In what could be the single biggest diplomatic blow to Donald Trump in the current administration, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu delivered a blistering rebuke to the President-elect in a speech delivered to Congress, warning Trump that Israel will not be allowed to be put in a situation where it has to choose between standing with its ally, the United States, or standing with its only democratic friend in the Middle East: I am addressing you not as the leader of a foreign power, but as the leader of the state of the Jewish people. I am addressing you as a friend, a partner, and a strong ally. Your statement about a one-state or two-state solution was not only wrong, it was highly inappropriate. I don't think there is a single democracy in the Middle East that accepts the current status quo, and all the problems it causes. And I'm certain that all of you, the vast majority of you in the Congress, care about the future of the Middle East, and peace in the Middle East. You want it. We want it as well. I want it. I want it as the leaders of my people, too. We know the history. We know the danger. But most of all, we want it for our children and grandchildren. The idea that this could be a lasting peace, that this could be a lasting security, is unrealistic. Because if it's a one-state or a two-state solution, the Palestinians will be masters of their own fate and they'll be able to continue to destroy Israel. If it's a one-state or a two-state solution, the Jews will have to live under Palestinian rule. If it's a one-state or two-state solution, it will be impossible to maintain the Jewish character of the state of Israel. If it's a one-state or a two-state solution, the conflict will continue. Israelis are the most talented, most creative, most visionary, most hard-working people on the face of the Earth. But we are
