Latest comments Fast paced brawler from 1999, Carmageddon 2 was a step beyond the original in a number of ways: Story-wise, there's now more of a plot and several playable characters, while the engine also adds the creative new 'Carmageddon Inverted' gameplay mode, making it less of a brawler and more of a small town demolition derby. The evil mayor also didn't fall into the sea when he died. There's more offline content as well, meaning that there's a level cap of 13, and a new bike mode. Add a few new customisable cars, and a 3D engine, and you end up with a game that is surprisingly addictive, and one that is well worth a look. Carmageddon is a free to play freeware browser game, probably the most famous action game of its day. Its story revolves around an alien race, the Koopa Troopas, who decided to exterminate the human race for some unknown reason. To do this, they turned the whole world into a gigantic traffic problem, and even spawned a special racing game where people of both sexes fight for their lives with their cars. A slimy politician - Toadster, in order to make more money - decided to unleash this alien apocalypse. Carmageddon is a free to play browser game, probably the most famous action game of its day. Wednesday, April 24, 2010 Blogger has broken down again and this time it's a bit more than just a broken link. Apparently, a new ie7 bug has hit the net with a vengeance, and you know how much I've disliked it. For those of you who are unfamiliar with this jargon, here's a quick definition from Google: "A compatibility bug means that although your browser says it supports a certain feature, we may not actually be able to make it work." Same here. With the same reason, the offending link, The Daily Mail, is still around but keeps getting "Broken" notices. In between these alerts, you can't access The Daily Mail at all. Since I don't want to click it for anything, I can't post from it, so I have to keep reminding you guys of other sites like Masthead, Yahoo! News, etc. to keep up with new stuff. Sunday, April 21, 2010 I have been having a really HORRIBLE time trying to get the right color to match my living room. After spending a Saturday taking care of my sick mother-in-law, I was tired and hungry. I had not had lunch until AFTER 1:00 pm that day because my husband, being on-call, didn't get a lunch break for ONE WHOLE HALF of the day. What's a girl to do, eat BROWNIES and get this pretty look (below)? No, seriously, momma needed some company, so I fed her into the "bathroom" of the filing cabinet. The thought of bringing her to the kitchen was pretty scary, as the cabinet is about 18 feet from the fridge and 50 feet from the stove. I'd already been boiling water from both, and I just didn't want to be around when the fumes hit. Imagine my surprise when I came in at 3:00 pm to a "free lunch" sitting in the top cabinet of the fridge. Always good to start thinking positive, huh? Daddy put the cake back in its box, Momma got a little more "breathing time" in the cabinet, and I got a nice piece of banana cream pie: I actually did NOT eat it from the freezer in the freezer drawer. Sorry! The moral of the story, always make sure the last known living critters are out of the "bathroom" before you eat. Yes, a day later I may
