The Adventures of 'Dr Who' DVD Panel Discussion The BBC One series of "Dr Who" shows marks 50 years in the United Kingdom. The BBC will be airing its new episodes of "Dr Who" from Friday, November 30th. For the 50th anniversary of the Doctor, The David Tennant edition of "Who Dared Wins" will air Friday, November 30th. Doctor Who fans will get to talk about the show, and take a closer look at "Who Dared Wins." With the 50th anniversary of the Doctor being celebrated, the BBC is bringing back one of the best series in the history of the Time Lord. The BBC was buzzing at the "Who Dared Wins" panel. One of the first questions asked was what it was like to meet "the Doctor." And who from the production staff was the most "fun to work with." And also what it was like dealing with the controversy that has surrounded "Who Dared Wins." Another question was what Matt Smith has learned from playing the Doctor. "I think he has a lot of respect for (the Doctor's) history, and he respects the audience. I think that comes through in the performance. I think it shows in this season as well," Smith said. Other questions included: why was The Doctor not dead in the 90's? Is it true that the Tardis will be revamped for the 50th anniversary? And has any fan ever been a

Cyberman? "Two years ago there was a scandal about an actor who was a ghost actor," Tennant said. "Doctor who, not Paul Shipper. Paul Shipper is a very good actor. It was about an actor. They were doing other work. He did that, and he was over-praised. I hope my wife is okay." With the 50th anniversary, the "Who Dared Wins" panel discussed what it was like working on the show. One of the first things that Tennant said was that he used a beautiful boy in the upcoming series. "I can't think of anything worse than having my son and working on a show that involves a lot of controversy," Tennant said. Ben Billingsley, who plays Tennant's companion, said, "I think he didn't want to look like a prat. He definitely wanted to look like the Doctor." And Amanda Abbington (Ace), who portrays Martha, said, "It was weird, because

Effects of noise on the signal-noise ratio of an ultrasound imaging system. An ultrasound imaging system that has been in service for a few years has been subjected to laboratory tests to evaluate its ability to operate as designed. The results of these tests have shown a degradation of the signal-noise ratio (SNR) of the image produced. We have investigated the effects of various system characteristics that could have an influence on the SNR. Three systems with different echo-contrast performance were used, and we applied a broadband noise of varying level and duration to the transducer. Our measurements show that the SNR is related to the initial pressure distribution of the system and to its transducer nonlinearity. At low levels of broadband noise, the SNR is essentially limited by the transducer nonlinearity, whereas at higher noise levels, acoustic coupling and diffraction are important. We developed a model that provides us with information on the acoustic field and the transmission function of the system at a specified point in the image. This model can be used to optimize the SNR, and it can also be used to adapt the impulse response of the system to the environment, e.g., to reduce acoustic distortion. {
