The more we see what people are like, the less we judge others. If you need to sleep more or less, do it. If you need more food, listen to the body and find out where it is saying you are hungry and make yourself eat. If you are feeling nauseous, have a bit of a lie down. There is a video that goes along with this article, click here. This is a great conversation starter at any occasion. As a young mother, I struggle with how to approach my children about sexual consent. How do I look them in the eye and say, without lying, that it is their right to say no? There is no right or wrong way to approach this. You have a duty to teach and support your children but you have a right to protect yourself too. If someone makes a move on you without asking, being forceful or being aggressive, feel free to say no. The 'no' is your right. If you are afraid of how someone will react or if it makes you feel
