Q: How to determine if array has just single elements I have an array of size n. All elements are equal but not necessarily the same. How can I determine if the array has just a single element? For example, suppose I have an array of size 6. 0 0 0 0 0 0 Then I will have 3 different solutions: 2-1. This is not correct because it has two elements. 0 0 2-2. This is correct because it has a single element. 0 0 3. Finally, this has 3 elements and is the correct one 0 0 0 Is there a way to define an Array function to do this check? I am using Android and Java Edit: The number of elements may not be known in advance. A: use List.size() - should be fast. The only advantage of your 3rd solution - you dont need to remember array length before reading elements. A: You'll want to check the length first: if (list.size() == 1) { // there's only one element } else if (list.size() == 2) { // there's two elements } else { // there's more than two elements } 1. Technical Field The present invention relates generally to a communication apparatus, a communication method and a computer readable medium. 2. Related Art A mainstream technique to search for a word or a name contained in a document formed from multiple pages is a technique using a graphical user interface (GUI) that is expressed by using windows. In such a GUI, when one of the windows that have been selected is enlarged and displayed, a region corresponding to the window is displayed on the screen so as to overlap adjacent pages, i.e., to be displayed in a spread form, and when a window is closed, the adjacent pages are retrieved. In the system performing such a search, an individual image is not treated as a region that is to be spread, and hence, there is a problem in that partial extraction cannot be performed.
