Features Key:

Rise, Tarnished - A fantasy action RPG that seamlessly mixes a close connection to the rich story of the game with real-time combat. It is a dynamic and challenging online game that would make both experienced and new players excited.
Online real-time combat - PvP mode that allows players to fight on the battle field online and challenge their skills with others.

Over 100 hours of quest - Fight in the Wars Between, take part in important battles, and complete important events and quests. Each quest has multiple solutions, so there are over 100 hours of quests.

Original system design - The original system design allows the player to enjoy the game while learning the game. A variety of content will be provided in addition to the regular quest.

Hundreds of brand new monsters, items, weapons, and other items - A variety of monsters, which have never been seen in the previous stage, appear in the game to meet the expectations of players worldwide. Also, over 100 weapons, armor and magic that have never been seen in the previous stage will appear.

"; export default value; You can see that this is the value of the state (as well as everything else in the state). You can see the viewEncapsulation used to set whether JS source or a React Native component is used. You can see that you can set the component property with a JSX expression. You can see that the props used to create a component are nullable. You can see the lifecycle methods used. You can see that state is also defined. With that in mind, let's get to the class... Document Lists As I said in the introduction, react-native-elements provides the component to allow for a native-like experience, in this case, a list. The remaining part is taken care of by the rest of the class's code: import React, { Text, View, StyleSheet } from 'react-native'; import { Content, Title, Subtitle, Text, View } from 'react-native-elements'; const home = () => (alert ('TEST!') } > TEST!); const styles = StyleSheet.create ({ onPress : { () => alert ('TEST!') } }; As we can see in the code above, there are no components for styling, just simple text components. Also, the props for and are made to look a bit nicer, by adding padding to the left. Once again, the component hierarchy of this item is : As we can see, the Text component shows some styling here and there. The View takes care of the padding between the two , as well as the shadow to the left of the . Sub menu Like
