I want to calculate the breakdown of my android app. I am using the Android Monitor app on Android Studio to see the processes that were running while the user was using my app. I am wondering if it is possible to know how much time was spent in each Activity/receiver/service. I mean, is it possible to do that? A: Yes, it is possible to do that. You can use the Time Profiler of Android Studio to view the memory allocations of each activity, services and receivers. If you want to view memory usage of only your application, use the Profiler Tree which will give you a list of all memory allocations made by your app. Q: How to remove specific audio from a flash video? I have a flash video and I want to remove a specific audio file from the video.I tried using an audio editor and converted the audio file to.flv so that it would work with the video as it works with the video.but the audio is not working.I did a lot of research and I found this code which I copied from an online video converter that I found but when I run the code,the audio plays along with the video but when I run the code again,i get same error.it will play that video but then it will turn out nothing and the video will continue. var myLoader1:Loader = new Loader(); var myLoader2:Loader = new Loader(); association with cardiovascular disease, hypertension, and type 2 diabetes in a morbidly obese population. The prevalence of prediabetes is increasing and this population is likely to be at increased risk for cardiovascular disease, hypertension, and diabetes. However, it is not clear whether the increased incidence of these co-morbidities is related to the duration of prediabetes or to the glucose levels or the degree of hyperglycemia present during the prediabetes period. We aimed to identify any association between cardiovascular disease, hypertension, and type 2 diabetes with varying duration of impaired glucose tolerance and with increasing levels of fasting or post-challenge glucose. Subjects included in the study were consecutively recruited from the Leeds Weight Loss Programme following genetic testing for susceptibility to obesity. Anthropometric indices (weight, height, waist circumference, hip circumference), blood pressure, and fasting and 2-hour post-oral glucose tolerance test (OGTT) plasma glucose and insulin levels were recorded. Cardiovascular disease (CVD) was defined as any self-reported history of CVD, and any self-reported or physician-documented history of hypertension or any anti-hypertensive medication use. Type 2 diabetes was defined as self-reported doctor diagnosed diabetes and/or use of any anti-diabetic medication. Insulin resistance was calculated by homeostasis model assessment of insulin resistance (HOMA-IR) >2.0. In total 742 subjects were eligible. Of these, 35.4% were undiagnosed diabetic and 16.9% were undiagnosed hypertensive. Increasing duration of diabetes was associated with increasing waist circumference, body mass index (BMI), HOMA-IR, and fasting glucose, but less with increasing diastolic blood pressure. Increasing time spent in prediabetes was associated with increasing body weight, BMI, waist circumference, diastolic blood pressure and HOMA-IR, but was not associated with fasting or post-OGTT glucose. A significant association between systolic blood pressure, CVD and hypertension were only evident after subjects had been classified by duration of diabetes. The presence of prediabetes may increase CVD risk but this may only be evident if the subject is kept in normoglycaemia for a prolonged period of time.Q: How to Make a copy of a list and remove elements? I am looking for
