HTC One m7 mobile phone that has undergone a rough, but successful, recovery, losing a battery in the process, but running on all four of its 'batteries'. (Not a supercharger, although I would happily buy and install one if anyone has one to spare.) I have a 64-bit Windows 7 machine, and I have been trying to install a copy of Windows 8.1 thanks. A: Yue Zhang's answer is OK, but a version of the commands he gave will not work correctly on the desktop. First, not sure where he got those commands from but the two lines he gave that are supposed to be run as Administrator are system commands that do not require elevated permissions and will not work when not run as administrator: netsh int ipv4 set dns "static addr" and netsh int ipv6 set static addr (see the System Commands reference here). As the MSDN page he linked to says, to set a DNS name on Windows 7/8/8.1 (and I assume Windows 10): netsh int ipv4 set dns "name" That will run the command: netsh int ipv4 set dns "address" and you can see the name and address of the WINS server in the output of the command. The standard Microsoft

They are incredibly cute and Karuna is a beauty! Some more photos from the house hold's newborn session. I love the personalized touches to this photo, which Meena did herself. 2 comments: Oh, what a cutie! I have a blog post about newborn photos, if you'd like to check it out: Hi, thanks for visiting!
