How evil did you get this winter? It's a wonderful time of year, but all around the Silver Marches it's been a cold, damp, freezing winter, and the refugees continue to flow into the city. As always, back in the human realms we're enjoying a great deal of prosperity, with land and people worth reaching for on both sides of the Silvered Marches. But those happier days are just a quick ride away! The long nights and dark days are on their way, and this should be a great time to visit Stoneholme, a dwarven city just beyond the edges of the Wastes. You are the Dark Days in Stoneholme party, a group of adventurers who are tired of the weather, the old world, and the humans as they have never been before. Unhappy with their lives, the Dark Days are looking for a fresh start somewhere! The adventure starts on the eastern side of Stoneholme, in the Square of Earth. The foundation of the city is built on a series of gently sloping platforms, each with an avenue of ancient banyan trees that form a major hub for the city. The city is the oldest and grandest of Stoneholme's dwarven creations, full of shops and fine eateries, and the second largest dwarven city in the whole of the Wastes. Throughout the city, you can encounter dwarves, generally curious but not always willing to help, unless you have some kind of trade agreement with them. The Dark Days team is made up of four 1st-2nd level PCs, and the party is ready for adventure! Dark Days is inspired by and compatible with the Pathfinder RPG and Powered by the Apocalypse rulesets. Dark Days in Stoneholme is a Pathfinder/3.5 adventure, compatible with the Advanced Dungeons & Dragons 1e ruleset and the Pathfinder Roleplaying Game. May has rejected calls to hold an emergency meeting of the Tory leadership on the issue of Brexit at the party conference later this month, even though the issue is likely to dominate the next three weeks of campaigning. “I’ve seen no conversations of this,” the prime minister said in a brief interview in her Downing Street office. “I think my position is very clear. We are leaving the European Union.”

Quick guide What are Brexit options now? Six months on from the referendum there are still no signs of Brexit talks resuming. Instead there is a race to see who can mix diplomatic ambiguity with repeated assertions that there is no ambiguity whatsoever. To complicate matters further, Labour are talking about renationalising parts of the UK’s infrastructure while Nigel Farage’s United Kingdom Independence party is committed to reducing immigration, both literally and by annexing shared services. The prime minister has promised that Brexit will happen by the end of October. They are even starting to run out of different forms that Brexit can take. Perhaps Labour’s best bet would be to simply do a deal – quickly. Mike Stuchbery/Getty Images

The prime minister said she would “absolutely” respect the result of the referendum and will only consider a different outcome to the one promised last June if another political context emerged that showed it was the best option for the UK. But that appears highly unlikely. The European commission president, Jean-Claude Juncker, told the Guardian on Tuesday he would not entertain any further negotiating sessions with the British government unless there is a firm indication that the UK government is ready to accept its liabilities before Brexit. “That is the condition for the [EU-UK] negotiations to be able to start,” he said.
