It's a November night. We're drinking a beer and eating a hamburger on a stoop in a student part of East Oak Lane. Salisbury and I have been working on this story for six months. We've written a story outline. Now we're rewriting to try to make it better. We're redoing the charts. We're changing every character's name. And we're eating an $8 hamburger with lettuce, tomatoes, and cheese — without ketchup or mustard — for the first time. "What is the deal with these brown leather chairs?" Salisbury asks. "Was it because they were the only ones who had some money left over from the founding of the community? Hey, wait a minute, how come these aren't fancy?" "This is the story you want to tell?... Ugh, what is your favorite TV show? Ooh, it's a very effeminate, very high-maintenance, cake-factory-with-7-kids-and-a-cat-living-at-the-top-who-is-immersed-in-her-own-little-world-and-only-rises-to-try-to-seduce-you show?" "Well, it's a show that I want to tell you about. And I can't tell you what's true. And that's because there is no truth to tell about this show, because it's set in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and that is a very Philadelphia place." This food, and this time, and maybe this corner, are completely fictional. I know that because, except for this beer, everything about this meal is made up. I'm not going to tell you which episode is set where. You'll have to watch. These commercials are for fringe placekits — items from the Philadelphia-area MicroCenter; affordable home theater audiovisual (or "aural") equipment. The two young men showing me these gadgets are Chas and his sidekick, Clowno. They are comic book artist, Plasticology. "So, Satomi, how can I convince you that LeVeon Bell will be the next NFL running back superstar? We got this tiny package for a small price. We got a 16-inch LED flat

We are pleased to announce another DLC, which is coming to you soon. The Dragon's Wrath Pack DLC will be available on May 5th. It will include three new dragons, three new weapons, and three new items. The three new dragons are the Black Dragon, the Blue Dragon, and the Purple Dragon. These new dragons are more powerful than the three previously available dragons. The Black Dragon is the largest of the three dragons, and its Bite can destroy entire blocks.
