Zombies. You know the deal. They're probably gonna try and eat you and all your cool stuff, if they don't get you first. So why not send someone out to stop 'em, right? Wrong. I did that. Well, I'm gonna do it right this time, you listenin'? I'm gonna send you into the future to stop the zombie threat before it begins. And by future I mean a pocket universe where scientists are trying to construct a machine that will turn even the 'good' zombies into good robots instead of brain eating monsters. It's gonna be awesome. Right? Right? Haha. You never know, the world has been that kind of place for a long time now. The Gameplay Wait a minute, what's this? It looks just like the arcade games, no? Well, its quite the same stuff, except, um, higher tech. You see, the technology we've come up with with barely scratches the surface of what we can do. And honestly, the only 'bad' thing about the machine is that if you screw up it takes 3 tries to deactivate and it drains your energy. So don't screw up. You got that. You got it? Good. Your mission is simple, you have been sent from the future to destroy the zombie threat. Its twofold, you must destroy the enemy core before they send any more robots to do their evil bidding. So get your hat on and say your prayers, because the machine is ready to go, and to make sure you don't get eaten on your way to the next level, here are some tips: Use your Weapons Wisely! By that I mean, keep your hand off the trigger until you're up to the finishing blow. The better you shoot, the higher your score. Don't go close to the zombie, or you'll get punched. Don't dash into the wall, you'll just get beat up and forced to start over. Don't get caught in the sunlight, you'll get knocked of your mech and have to start over. The Control Let's start with the controls, first of all, I recommend you memorize where all the buttons are, because chances are you will need 'em. Nothing is going to be easy about this one, trust me, you'll be glad you know what's where. Start up on the main button, then work your way through the four side buttons. Its pretty much all directional, its

The hustle and bustle of the UK's capital city and the sprawling countryside of Essex and East Anglia come together in one fantastic modern route for Train Simulator. The 19th Century London Liverpool Street is the City terminus point of the Great Eastern Main Line before the line winds through the suburbs of London and past the Olympic Park, into Essex and on to Suffolk. The earliest section of the line (often shortened to 'GEML') opened in 1839 and ran from Devonshire Station (in Mile End, London) to Romford, Essex. A year later, the London terminus was moved to Bishopsgate and over subsequent years the line was extended further into Essex, reaching Ipswich in 1846. London Liverpool Street became the City terminus of the route in 1872, and now sees more than 57 million passengers each year. The 70 mile route from London to Ipswich sees daily fast passenger services to and from East Anglia with slower commuter services serving the 'banker belt'. It is electrified at 25 kV AC using overhead wires and has a line speed of up to 100mph (161km/h). The line also carries frequent freight operations working from Felixstowe and Ipswich to Stratford, where connections are made with the North London Line and main lines radiating from London to other parts of the UK. A common sight on the line is the Siemens-built Class 360 EMU, operated by Greater Anglia and included with the route. These 'Desiro' units were introduced to service in 2003 and by mid-2004 had completely replaced the ageing Class 312 slam-door units. The four-car units have a top speed of 100mph and quick acceleration, making them ideal for long commuter lines with frequent station stops. Notable landmarks along the route include London Liverpool Street, Stratford, the Olympic Park, Ilford Carriage Sidings, Chelmsford, Colchester, Manningtree, Stoke Tunnel (the only railway tunnel on the Great Eastern Main Line) and Felixstowe Container Terminal and Docks, as well as the Braintree branch from Witham and the short branch line to Colchester Town. Pictures of Life has a colorful storyline and graphics. It's a puzzle game you play against four other players. The game has a timer that counts down from 20 minutes. You can save the game in the middle of the adventure. When you start the game, you get to a random picture. After that, you find a cursor and get to move some tiles around. The cursor moves over a picture and jumps to the next, if it can't fit. This happens quite often as the game has to make room for the picture. So just move everything around and make room for the next picture. You can play in a Japanese version, French, German and English languages. Want to know more about the game? Head to the Wikipedia or game review site. At first, the game throws a lot of obstacles at you, but after a while you get used to it, and it still is somewhat hard as some cards have the same picture. This can be easily fixed if you stop the game and make sure you have the last card solved. Your energy will also run out, if you don't find a way to skip cards.

El diario de la Ciudad de la entonces quinta capital argentina, Caras y Caretas difundió una gráfica en la que se podía observar la imagen del último mandatario de las Farc Ernesto Samper con un nariz que no era muy distinto del de él. La cifra oficial que circula de este episodio es que el exgobernador de Chaco fuera hecho una broma sexual cuando trabajaba como periodista, y fue refrendada por los mismos miembros de la editorial como un "texto" que debía "la edad". Sin embargo, la anécdota estuvo circulando con frecuencia por las redes sociales y hasta hoy día no desentraigó la duda de que la imagen difundida por el diario de la Ciudad de la entonces quinta capital argentina (entre 1978 y 1983) fue montaje. El caso es que muchos

What's new in Super Sky Arena Original Soundtrack:

Slime!!! Hi, I'm Embr. When I was a kid I played in the rock and roll clubs in Scotland's Fife Co' and loved it. I suppose some of it came from the legends of my birth town of Dunfermline R and B Jimmy (Jimmy the Sonic and his Juniors) and Mindy Martin-Harrison and the Honeydrippers, Jimmy, Innes and my Grandad, Willie Martin, who was a professional bass player. I got into rhythm'n rock when I was a teenager and suddenly realised you didn't have to be a The Clash or John Lennon to be a punk. I remember the first rock group I saw was the Small Faces and Little Stevie Wonder was the best rhythm'n' blues singer. I was 12 and his version of "ABC" was the first Jimmy Page guitar lick that made me really want to buy a guitar. After leaving Fife Co' and starting school in Elgin, I listened to everything - doo-wop, blues, rock and roll, whatever was out. But my first real love was still rockabilly. Looking back now, I was what is now called a Southern rockabilly artist. I played skins and 15s played banjo and joined in on most of the lead vocals. But I didn't think it would amount to anything. Fast forward to 20 years later - I'm over 50 now, still live in Scotland and started playing gigs again, in different pubs as my four tracks really never caught on. I sang 'AC/DC songs at my gigs, because I love them and I knew they were a known group, and they became my favourite fanatical group of all time. It never ceased to amaze me how many people I would meet who just happened to know them. The original Guns N' Roses were practically a household name in Scotland by that time, and the creation of the song "Paradise City" had just lost that huge number of GN'R albums to me. I found the song I heard one time on Neil Young's "Tonight's the Night" album and found it was called "Paradise City" and I totally had to have it. It has been on 45's, cassettes and CD's all over Scotland, but, when I went down the shop and looked, it wasn't in. I had a cassette of Guns N' Roses albums, none of which told me where to find "Par
