The year is 2050, or maybe it's 2100. The timeline is up to you. Humans have colonized the world, even the skies are no longer off limits. Well, some of the skies. Clouds drift across the planet like some kind of floating debris. It is our job to see what is in the clouds. With the advances in AI, we have made use of machine learning to develop a new species of humanoids. Our work with the clouds has been successful, but we are at a crossroads. With some of our discoveries, there is a possibility that the human race will throw its achievements away. If things continue this way, we will be doomed to a slow death, or we will reach the next stage. We now face a choice. Will we pursue new technologies, or return to our roots? This is what we have to decide in POPPIN' DONUTS. Key Features: Clouds have never been more fun! Take into account machine learning. It's a breeze now. Let the wind decide the fate of the human race. Work with nature, or get smeared with technology. A choice between two timelines. One may be worse than the other. • The skies are your domain! • What's in the clouds? • Lost control? • Made of cream About Tin Star Games Tin Star Games is an independent game developer based out of San Francisco with a focus on promoting diversity in games through artistic design, narrative, and character development. While we do have a website, we do not publish any details about the game or its characters online. Our focus is really on the gameplay and the story elements of the game. I'm very interested to read more about the story. That's not something most games are willing to share! Do you think the player will make a choice between two timeline? Or will only the player's decision in the game decide their fate?]]>The Neon Daydream Tue, 11 Nov 2017 17:21:57 +0000 reading The Neon Daydream]]>"This is what it

Aimed at adult gamers aged 16+, this one-versus-one choose-your-own-adventure game focuses on food. It's a duel between The Big Bad Wolf and The Three Little Pigs as they try to launch and operate their own restaurant. One player plays as The Big Bad Wolf, the ambitious, self-styled wolfy Wolf Chef. The other player plays as The Three Little Pigs, a team of three little fellow hoteliers. The rules are simple: The Player who lands more food wins. If the two players land the same amount of food, it's a draw. If they land the same amount of kitchen equipment, they also split the profits. The game consists of a series of interactive menus, during which decisions must be made that determine the course of the game. The player may choose to cause their opponent to win or fail, each of which has its own unique consequences. Some paths are more enjoyable for the Wolf, some for the Pigs. Will you keep your enemies at bay and advance your agenda? Will you be the vengeful saboteur or the professional restaurateur? Find out in The Wolf's Bite! The Wolf's Bite is a one-versus-one choose-your-own-adventure game with an entrepreneur fairy tale twist. Inspired by stories such as "The Three Little Pigs" and "The Stinky Cheeseman and Other Fairly Stupid Tales", the game revolves around thwarting the other player while advancing your agenda. Be a professional restaurateur or a vengeful saboteur, the competition is on! After failing to thrive in the highly competitive residential demolition industry, mostly due to difficulties dealing with brick construction, The Big Bad Wolf decided it was time for a career change. Unable to resist the lure of entrepreneurship, he decided to enter the restaurant business. The Three Little Pigs, dissatisfied with their free sample demolitions, are conspiring against The Big Bad Wolf and his new restaurant, The Wolf's Bite. The grand opening is next week. Will The Big Bad Wolf finally launch a successful enterprise or will the Three Little Pigs throw up a metaphorical brick wall and stop him? Features A competitive choose-your-own-adventure game for one or two players. Over 375 unique paths through the game for each player, almost every playthrough can be completely different. What's new:

at the Bottom of the World [Review] The year is 200 A.D, and for the first time in centuries there is peace in the world. Time to celebrate. But that's the last thing that those on board a whaling ship want. Or rather, it is the crew of the Audubon, captained by the devious character known as Monsieur Farnoux, that want peace, and they will stop at nothing to obtain it. As we've seen before with BioShock, that's not necessarily a bad thing. Deep Race has all the excitement and danger of an old-fashioned rail adventure, right in this time period. You'll work with your chosen crew across the seas, and there's a bigger prize at the end than securing a share of the bounty from the harpooned whale. Get ready to dive deep. The rules An old-school style of game, Deep Race tells the story through a series of books. Upon purchasing the game there are five books available, the first of which is almost the only dungeon (or 'objective') that the player needs to get through in order to win the game. In that first book, the crew is scattered, but soon you'll meet up with Admiral Denard, who plays an active role in the rest of the game. The other books remain behind, one book per crew member. You'll chase down almost everything the crew wanted, but never quite get to the long-awaited treasure that you've come to hunt for. How do you get this undersea treasure? Basically, you'll need to tackle almost all challenges that our hero encounters. Every other challenge also becomes easier upon completing the first book, which helps ensure that you don't get too frustrated to continue into the other books. The earlier crew members can also lend a hand when it comes to examining some of the deeper locations, but there's a segue to the latter books where your crew is drawn into a conflict of their own making that potentially rotates the game entirely. There's some apparent need to explain the different styles of play (described further below), so I'll direct you there to do just that. Like BioShock, this game rewards players with the freedom of character creation, but Deep Race also gives the player more

Burando is a game about loyalty and sacrifice. You play as Burando, a wolf who after travelling from the frozen north begins exploring the world for the first time. On the way, you meet and fall in love with a wolf named Yumeko. As the story goes, Yumeko, after having been rescued by Burando, decided to return to the frozen north with you. You live happy together in the forest and the love blooms between the two wolves. But the journey you and Yumeko take is fraught with danger, and that's not all... You also begin to notice that strange eyes are watching you...During the last decade, the term 'static component' has been often used to define the essential biophysical properties of a surface. In particular, it has been mainly applied to cell attachment on three-dimensional- (3-D) synthetic hydrogels (polymers) of defined composition and architecture. However, the static component only partially explains the mechanism of cell attachment on such hydrogels. This is mainly due to the dynamic component, which is essential for the physiological function of cells and is not yet well understood. Despite decades of research, the mechanisms underlying dynamic cell attachment are still not fully understood. Perhaps the most informative information about the dynamic component has come from studies on the attachment of growth factors that regulate specific cellular functions. With the ability to enhance specific cellular functions, it has become possible to separate the physiological function of a specific cell type from its static component. Thus, it was not surprising that the attachment of growth factors to surfaces provided the first dynamic information about the mechanism of cell adhesion. More recently, the same group of researchers has demonstrated that specific growth factors can also regulate the cellular functions which involve the dynamic component of the attachment. We suggest that it will be useful to define the dynamic component as the ability of cells to dynamically 'know' where they should be, when and how long they should be there. It is therefore vital that we understand dynamic cell attachment as it is intricately regulated by a single cell, the fluid in which it is being carried, and its microenvironment. The research strategy proposed in this R15 proposal will determine the dynamic nature of the attachment of Schwann cells. Schwann cells are the support cells of the peripheral nervous system. They are responsible for both the protection of the neuron as well as the generation of the myelin sheath. The goal of this project is to delineate the mechanism of Schwann cell ad
