A: Though I am a bit unsure what you mean with "attached to the edge" because normally you use only the geometry of the curve, but maybe this is what you wanted: \documentclass{article} \usepackage{tikz} \begin{document} \begin{tikzpicture} \begin{scope} \path [fill=blue!50] plot [samples=20,smooth cycle] (0,{ -cos(30*x)}); \path [draw] (0,0) -- (10,0); \path [fill=blue!50] plot [samples=20,smooth cycle] (10,0); \path [draw] (0,5) -- (10,5); \end{scope} \ode[anchor=south] at (0,-1) {\Large A}; \end{tikzpicture} \end{document} , on another day, like an inch away, then the ball gets there and the sweet spot of the bat hits the sweet spot of the ball, and the ball doesn't come away from it." He came up with a simple solution: Hide the wind, lock the ball down, replace the base of the point. If a batter homered, it was good for the game. If he hit a grounder, it was bad for the game. You play the wind, he said, you get more balls in play. He knew it. He struggled at first and then developed an expertise in the small things, the little gifts he could give to the Windy 0cc13bf012
