Answer: In India beauty includes skin, hair and the figure. Women in India have the tendency to like wearing clothing which accentuates their beauty. Some of these clothes are tight fitting trousers, vests or blouses which are not made in India. Generally these types of clothes are made in China and sometimes are also imported from Pakistan. Clothing is generally made in India. Most clothes are made with cotton. They are comfortable and also as beautiful as they can be. At times skin is made into beauty by the use of creams and cosmetics. Some of these cosmetics are made of medicines and chemicals. Women also tend to use more lipstick and color their hair more to make it more pleasing to the eye. The hair is considered to be a beauty item in India. Everyone has long hair. The best hair color is auburn. Black hair is considered to be the most beautiful. Other colors are more common. The hair is usually kept in a natural state without making it too curly or straight. Curly hair is considered unattractive in India. Natural straight hair is considered beautiful. Even if black hair is used in a mass make up it will look beautiful without being too heavy. The figure of the Indian woman is very attractive. Indian girls are slim with the face of a goddess. They have very slim bodies. The skirt covers the knees. Sometimes the lower is put on the knees and sometimes is cut just to the knee. The Indian woman is generally not bold in exposing herself. Generally it is not accepted in India to be too bold.1. Anthony de Mello, founder of the Perennial Philosophy,â€has been one of the few writers and spiritual leaders.Most of us are already familiar with the overwhelming influence of human factors in accidents. But some of us are not. Take for example, New Zealand's most tragic accident to date. In 1994, 10-year old Amanda Spencer lost her life. It's believed that she accidentally strayed into a truck's reversing cycle, and the truck driver had no visibility of her at the time. What does this mean? That it was entirely possible that she didn't see or understand the approaching truck, which is something that a driver should check as well as being aware of the environment. And if we apply this idea to our own lives, it has a real impact. We need to be aware, and understand all of our surroundings if we want to ensure we are not a hazard to our selves or those around us. Because accidents are not entirely avoidable – but we can certainly mitigate our risks. This is easy to say, but much more difficult to do in practice. How do we do this? There is no doubt that many of us have a dashboard in front of us right now, and we use it to navigate, and remember our destinations. But do you use it as a navigational aid? And that's one of the problems. Because if you're like me, you feel that you're supposed to be able to navigate to the green in front of you, or the house, without a map in front of you. And that's not always the case. We need to stop, think, and acknowledge our mistakes – and ask ourselves if these mistakes are a product of being distracted – or being distracted from being in tune with our environment.
