Paul Johnston, CP24.com A 43-year-old man has been convicted of murder in the death of an Alberta first-responder who was shot and killed while responding to a home invasion in a small community west of Edmonton in 2011. A jury at the Lethbridge Court of Queen's Bench found Christopher Lucas guilty of first-degree murder in the death of Ryan MacFarlane, who was killed while responding to a call at a rural home near Valenca, Alta., in November 2011. MacFarlane, a 22-year veteran of the RCMP, was shot several times while responding to the call, including to the head, neck and hands. He had been working as a crime scene investigator with the RCMP's major crime unit at the time of his death. MacFarlane was working with a group of provincial police when the call came in to their radio about a possible robbery at the home. That group — which included MacFarlane, Const. Kelly MacDougall and Const. David Epp, along with two other provincial police officers, Const. Paul Glick, and Const. W. Richard Davis — was preparing to leave the scene when MacFarlane was shot. MacDougall testified that she was in the group's unmarked police cruiser, and was standing on the driver's side, when they heard the report of gunfire. "We heard the shot and we kind of looked at each other and our stomachs sank," she testified. When MacDougall got out of the cruiser, she testified that she saw MacFarlane drop. She found MacFarlane's body on the front lawn of the home. She testified that she and MacDougall then began doing CPR on MacFarlane while the other officers called for an ambulance. MacFarlane's wife, Lindsay, also testified in the Lethbridge courtroom, along with a colleague of her husband's, Stephen Rankine, who said he drove MacFarlane home after the shooting. The Crown also called a firearms expert to testify in the trial. Julie Robillard, the RCMP investigator who performed the autopsy, testified that the four gunshot wounds were inflicted from a distance of a few feet away. "All of the shots were fired in the upper body," she testified, with MacFarlane'

Flat Irons In an attempt to help my children stay away from all the carbs I've put flat irons on sale at Walmart. I like them and they aren't expensive at $19.99. I think these would be great for carrying in your purse, that way you can use them in your hotel room or at a potluck. My kids will be very grateful. And my husband will just think I'm nuts. You can find these on clearance for $9.99 at Walmart.Q: Query using multiple Java 8 Streams I am new to Java 8 Streams. I wanted to perform a task with four streams namely Find the count of the string records in a log file against corresponding text (timestamp) records, Find the number of maximum string records against corresponding timestamp records, Find the number of minimum string records against corresponding timestamp records and Find the number of the maximum line count (number of lines in the above mentioned file) against a particular timestamp record Please let me know how to perform the task with Java 8 Streams. A: Just for the first point, to filter out just the timestamps that match your first string, you can filter it using the built-in matcher, like this: `long count = logLines.stream().filter(Line::getTimestamp).mapToLong(Line::getText).distinct().count();` The sort and filtering stream pipeline is a very powerful syntax. For the second point, how can you get the max and min string values? If you can get the strings to begin with, then we can use a `minBy` comparison. We call `max()` on a Stream of Strings to get the max value, and then we call `min()` to get the minimum. `long min = logLines.stream().sorted().filter(Line::getTimestamp)`
