What's New In?

The cytokines interleukin-4 (IL-4) and IL-13 regulate the formation of interferon- $\gamma$  (IFN- $\gamma$ )-producing Th1 cells. Since IL-4 and IL-13 are produced by alternatively-activated M2 macrophages and eosinophils and induce similar immunoregulatory effects, these cytokines are implicated in allergic inflammation. While IL-4 and IL-13 share high sequence homology and bind to the same receptor (IL-4R), the signaling pathways downstream of IL-4R and IL-13R are quite different. The IL-4R couples to Janus family kinases (JAK) 1 and 3 while the IL-13R couples to JAK1 and JAK2. IL-4R and IL-13R complexes associate with different signal transducer and activator of transcription proteins (STATs) and mediate distinct biological effects. STAT6 and STAT3 are critical for mediating the allergic responses. However, the molecular mechanisms through which IL-4R and IL-13R regulate the differentiation of Th1 cells are still unclear. Recent studies indicate that T-bet plays a critical role in promoting Th1 differentiation. Our preliminary studies show that IL-4R and IL-13R regulate T-bet, a master regulator of Th1 differentiation, in murine Th1 cells. Further studies show that IL-4R and IL-13R promote T-bet expression in a Stat6-dependent manner. We also show that IL-4R and IL-13R regulate a novel pathway for Th1 cell differentiation through inhibiting the expression of the transcription factor Id2. Based on these preliminary data, we hypothesize that IL-4R and IL-13R regulate T-bet expression in a Stat6-dependent manner. IL-4R and IL-13R modulate the expression of the transcription factor Id2. Our overall objective is to elucidate the molecular mechanisms through which IL-4R and IL-13R modulate T-bet expression in order to develop novel therapeutics that will improve the treatment of allergic inflammation. We will test our hypothesis through the following four specific aims: (1) Characterize the molecular mechanisms through which IL-4 and IL-13 regulate T-bet expression. (2) Characterize the molecular mechanisms through which IL-4 and IL-13 regulate Id2 expression. (3) Characterize the function of IL-4R in vivo
