Field of the Invention This invention relates to an apparatus and method for the recovery of an image developed on a photothermographic element and contained in a processing fluid, such as a fixing or washing fluid. More specifically, the invention relates to an apparatus and method for recovering a toned image which has been developed in a processing fluid on a photothermographic element by photodisintegration of at least a portion of the image in a non-oxidizing atmosphere. 2. Description of the State of the Art In a typical embodiment of the commonly assigned U.S. Pat. No. 5,427,854 entitled "Method and Apparatus For Formation of an Image", a photothermographic element comprising silver-containing particles and a photosensitive agent is used to record an image in a photothermographic element processing apparatus. The photothermographic element is heated to temperatures above about 100.degree. C. in an imagewise manner and a processing fluid is passed over the element to wash and fix the element. In this method, the photosensitive agent is generally chemically reduced to elemental silver. During the imagewise heating of the photothermographic element, the photosensitive
