ACS is a newly formed section of the Section of Surgery, a division of the Department of Surgery, at the New England Medical Center. There are approximately 18 board-certified surgeons that are members of the ACS, and approximately 200 resident surgeons and residents in training. There are a large number of active surgeons that are not members of the ACS, but provide a significant amount of surgical care to patients in the Greater Boston area. Thus, the ACS has a large number of patients with surgical disorders. ACS has a strong core of basic scientists who support the clinical research activities of the ACS.
