The importance of memory in cognitive and motor rehabilitation. The importance of memory in cognitive and motor rehabilitation has been neglected and no systematic study of the subject has ever been published. The purpose of the current study was to examine the effect of memory training on cognitive and motor rehabilitation. Participants in the study were 34 patients with vascular dementia and 34 patients with Parkinson's disease (34-66 years of age, matched by age, sex, and years of education). They were randomly assigned into one of two groups. Group 1 underwent memory training, which was administered on a daily basis for 8 weeks; and Group 2 did not undergo any training. Before and after the 8 weeks of treatment, the subjects' cognitive and motor abilities were tested. A mixed $2 \times 2 \times 2$ ANOVA was performed on the data obtained. The main effects of Group and time were found to be significant in our study, which indicates that both groups improved significantly in cognitive and motor performances. Our study demonstrates the importance of memory and an individualized approach to memory rehabilitation in the treatment of vascular dementia and Parkinson's disease.
