This is what I want to know more about, so please help me out. There are some pretty good tutorials on user flow and such, but I'd like to know more about what kind of business is the most successful for bootstrapping. Does it have to be anything like Twitter? We want to be profitable, but I don't want us to be the big tech companies, I want our bootstrapped mentality to carry over into our product. Thanks for all the help! ====== staunch ------ bkrausz You can definitely bootstrap a company focused on making money now, but you are going to have to be willing to build a lot of stuff up before you start selling it. Most of the time once you have both a product and a customer base you can go fully bootstrapped. Also, if you want to focus on making more money before you have a product then pursue an SBA loan. ~~~ mattwallo Thanks, that's exactly what I want to avoid. Let's just say that I don't want to be a good cash flow generator first. We want to do both, but that's the data I'm looking for. ------ Mz I think the trick is figuring out who is going to be your target market and what they are going to be wanting and then building on that. You are going to need to learn everything and you are probably going to need to accept that you are going to need to wait on getting the first revenue to pay for the other stuff. # Copyright 2016 Facebook, Inc

Chuckie Egg 2017 Challenges (Final 2022)

- This has been in development for 2 years - Currently in Preview on Steam (with no release date yet) - Script is still being hammered out - Could be 2 hours, could be 100 hours or more - Features - Implements all gameplay mechanics (we have over 50, no doubt) - Physics Model - Custom weapon SFX - Custom animations - Battle Scenario Settings - Basic victory conditions - High Quality Art - Custom Music - Custom Rigged Combat Sound FX Feature is something that is at the top of the list, but it is not there yet. This is a 3D action, roleplaying simulation, game in which you control a Japanese samurai and fight in period themed environments Character is controlled by arrow keys Double click left mouse button to drop your weapon Square to sprint Z to jump R to double jump Right click to grab things with your right hand and throw left mouse button to attack or block I added a video of the combat a few days ago and it looks like the game is going well. I haven't committed to spending more money yet but I think that I have gotten a good feel for the mechanics for $500. Any help in telling me how to enhance my game would be greatly appreciated A: When you bring up your animation state, it does not update with your keyboard input, you need to press SPACEBAR key to play the animation/setup. You need to play through the previous scenario and setup your actions in the object viewport. When setting up the "Attack" animation, you can't just toggle to target and damage like you do in an animated camera viewport in object mode, you need to click the group with the enemy or start using your weapon's built in interact mode. And since you're not really editing objects, you can press E to start editing your target. You can use the Z key to make your units swing, the X key to swing your weapon into their head, and control the camera with your left click on the ground. When using the "Attack" animation, you shouldn't be checking the current game time, you should be using the target's time and apply your attack based on that. When in object mode, you can type in a right click to set the speed of the attack. This will set your attack to start out slow and gain speed based on time. c9d1549cdd

Chuckie Egg 2017 Challenges (Final 2022)

Gameplay is designed to be as hard as possible. There are no tutorials and no grinding. You must play to win. Player versus the enemies. If you lose all your power, you lose all. There are no lives or health bars. There are no saves. There are many variants of ships. These variations include speed, range, capacity of ammunition, cargo, and resources. Ship names come with the play. Every single one of them serves a purpose. All ships are armed with lasers, photon cannons, photon missiles and/or other weapons. Get hit by a photon cannon and the whole ship explodes in a ball of flame. You can still be "fried" by a ship that is not equipped with lasers or photon cannons. Dodge - To evade a missile and get away, quickly swipe your ship to the side. Hold to make the ship perform a flip turn, or point the ship in a direction of the enemy ship, then slowly "slide" the control stick in the direction you want. It is better to evade by using the camera view because you cannot see the missiles coming. Remember your camera view can be used for other things. A quick tap of the button brings your ship to view with a 3D effect. You will then see the missiles in your vicinity. Touch down with the ship to destroy the missile. Quickly tap the button to bring up the ship's view. Maintain close to an enemy ship to score high damage. Acquire more resources from asteroids and collect them in your cargo section. When the enemy gets close, be sure to use your lasers. Destroy the engines, destroying the enemy ship. Star Runner is not a game that is easy. Some of the game's hardest missions will send you into the orbit of the moon. Good luck. Be careful and keep your cool. Science Fiction sports game experience.
