estrogens and carcinoembryonic antigen in young men: effects of physical activity and cancer risk. Cancer risk from human papillomavirus (HPV) infection is greatest in young people. Estrogen metabolism may be involved in HPV-related carcinogenesis. We hypothesized that high estrogen metabolism rates could be associated with high levels of carcinoembryonic antigen (CEA) and low levels of testosterone in young men. The associations between the urinary excretion of estrogens and estrone glucuronide with serum CEA, sex hormone-binding globulin (SHBG), free testosterone, and leutinizing hormone (LH) were evaluated in 57 healthy men (ages 23-33 years) during an overnight stay in a metabolic ward. Testosterone excretion was higher in high-intensity compared to low-intensity exercise (P The first time I learned about how to recognize a Great White shark was when I was fishing with my dad in the Gulf of Mexico. The Captain of the boat had just said, "They have nothing to worry about." "We are small and they are big," he assured us, "They aren't here to eat us, they are here to eat fish." At that moment, I had never seen a shark, much less read about them or been briefed by the NOAA. But this seemed like an opportunity not to be missed. Fortunately, a Great White shark sighting was waiting for us in about half an hour. The 3.5 m shark we
